METHODISTS TO DANCE.

Dancing, card playing and theatre going, diversions most expressly forbidden in the discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, have been the bugaboos which have haunted the younger members of this denomination for years. The dictum against these popular forms of amusement was laid down when the great mass of Methodists were in sympathy with them. The trend of the times and of public sentiment is toward more liberal views on the ever mooted question of what kind of amusements Christians may in-dulge in. As the Methodist Church originally drew the line most sharply, the change of sentiment is more mark-ed in this denomination than in others.

Now a movement is on foot in this particularly strict sect to do away entirely with the prohibitive rules against special forms of amusement and to leave the matter entirely to the conscience of the individual church members. Singular as it may seem, this movement is not suggested by the laity, but is being brought about by the clergy. The prophecy is freely made by those familiar with the situation that at the next assembly ling of the general conference of the church the objectionable clause in the discipling will be expanded. New Very liscipline will be expunged .- New York

Herald. The sermon p eached at the Church of Our Father, in Washington last Sunday night, by Rev. A. G. Rogers, pastor, dealt with the social problem of dancing and the attitude of the church towards it. "We are living at a time," said Dr. Rogers, "when the old ideas about ethics are passing away. Any man who will read the history of Eugland at the time of the Puritans can well say that this people had a good reason for condemning dancing. Our congregations do play cards and do dance, and we cannot lay down any rules as to what they shall do. Per se there is no more evil in dancing than in walking. It is not for ministers to condemn such pleasures, but rather to condemn excesses." continued the speaker. "We cannot say that a person may not live a pure and noble Christian life who dances. The Bible does not legislate against amuse-ments and it does not go into details on the conduct of Christians."

A FALSE FRIEND.

wife with Thomas Lockwood, The guilty pair left Wilson's home a week ago, taking with them the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson. Wilson, accompanied by his wife and child and Lockwood, arrived in this country from England three weeks ago. They remained in New York a week, coming to Philadelphia two weeks ago, and established their home in the modest two-story house on Hel-en street. The first week was spent in furnishing the house, and Saturday week Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by the child, went out to buy additional furniture. Shortly after Lockwood left the house and that was the last Wilson saw of any of them. For a week he wandered about the city looking for them, keeping his trouble to himself until Saturday, when, at the suggestion of a neighbor, to whom he confided the story, he reported it to the po-

Mrs. Wilson took with her $170, almost all of the money her husband had, as well as all of the clothes and the best of her husband's wearing apparel. Wilson, who was a warehouse workman in Yorkshire, is 42 years old and his wife is 35, although she looks much younger. They have been married 18 years. Lockwood, who is a dyer, is 35 years old. Wilson met him in Yorkshire six months ago and they became friends. When Wilson decided to come December and January.

to this country Lockwood suggested that he would like to accompany him, but did not have the money. His friend, who had saved several hundred dollars, urged him to come, agreeing to advance his expenses on condition that he should pay him back after he secured employment in America. Under these conditions they came, Wilson paying Lockwood's passage and his expenses since they landed in New York. He suspected no wrong until the desertion of the pair a week are and parture of the pair a week ago and seems thoroughly broken up over his misfortune, crying like a child when he

The sailors were swearing in their happy-go-lucky, unconscious way. "How shocking! What language!" groaned the parson, trembling from head to foot.

"Now, do you for a moment think that those sailors would go on in that naugh.

"True, true," replied the parson, somewhat calm by the assurance. "One may sometimes pluck the sweet flower of comfort from the vile cloak of sin. The ways of Providence are indeed inscrutable," and back he crawled to his room in a degree reassured.

Two hours later the storm had in creased in violence, the wind raged and howled more violently, and huge waves broke over and seemed to submerge the great ship. 'The parson was out of his room again, more scared than before, and was seen silently, nervously fumbling his way along the wet deck to the forecastle. He was deadly pale and trembling with excitement. He and trembling with excitement. He listened. The sailors were shouting, and a tremendous oath amid the din reached his ear.

'Thank heaven," murmured he "they are still at it. They still blas-pheme. There is no danger yet, the Lord be praised!"
